

Hurricane Matthew was the 13th named storm, 5th hurricane, and the 2nd major hurricane of the 2016 Atlantic hurricane season. Matthew was a category 5 hurricane along with being the longest-lived major hurricane forming after September 25 in the Atlantic basin on record (6.5 days). The impact from Matthew stretched from Haiti to North Carolina, causing widespread flooding, making Matthew the costliest Atlantic hurricane since Hurricane Sandy in 2012.
